

DESCRIPTION OF EDUCATIONAL EFFECTS

After completing the B.A. course at the faculty of National Security the graduate:

possesses general knowledge about the character of security sciences, their place in the system of education and is able to identify their relation to other sciences possesses general knowledge about the legal regulations concerning national security and about the sources of law; knows the relationship between national and international law in the area of security possesses general knowledge about the state's political system, its structure, functioning and institutions, particularly in the area of national security, knows their organisation and historical evolution knows the general relations and ways of functioning of public institutions at the national and international level; knows the basic relationships between different legal systems knows the range and basic categories of international relations as well as the factors shaping international relations also in the historical context identifies and characterises the types of social bonds and their characteristic factors as well as the challenges and threats to security occurring at the national and integrated international community level has basic knowledge about the individual, his/her rights and obligations towards other individuals and state bodies knows the ways of acquiring knowledge about current legal regulations in the country and at the international level, methods and techniques of obtaining other data needed to describe social structures and institutions together with processes occurring within and among them. Knows the methods of analysis and interpretation of information for efficient decision making in the area of security has elementary knowledge about designing and carrying out research within security sciences knows the functions and techniques of managing organisations and understands the role of the managing staff in the process of management; characterises the forms and character of activities in the area of security management taking into consideration the norms and rules which govern the social processes knows and explains military and non-military threats in the area of security, understands their causes and proposes at the elementary level the ways of counteracting them possesses knowledge about the system of professional, moral and ethical norms, rules and sources of those rules organising the social structures and institutions connected with national security knows and explains the influence of historical conditions on the awareness and identity of societies, knows at the basic level the evolution of philosophical, military and political thought knows and understands the notions in the area of industrial property law and copyright law knows the general rules of creating and developing enterprises also in the area of their activities implemented in order to ensure security knows the theoretical and practical rules of providing premedical first-aid is able to carry out observations and interpretations of social phenomena, analyses their links to different areas of security correctly uses basic terms related to national security is able to make use of basic theoretical knowledge and obtain data needed for analysing particular social processes and phenomena in the area of national security is able to correctly analyse the causes and course of particular political and legal processes and other social phenomena related to national security, correctly explains their historical background is able to make use of basic theoretical interpretations in order to analyse, interpret and implement activities ensuring national security; is able to solve concrete problems related to national security, predict their course and the results of planned activities is able to correctly use the norms of generally applicable law and internal law, in particular with a view to proper using the procedures of security and crisis management is able to make use of the knowledge acquired in the area of security, law and ethics to analyse and solve basic professional problems in accordance with the rules of law and ethics analyses proposed solutions of concrete problems related to national security and proposes his/her own solutions possesses the ability to analyse and assess the processes of management and decision taking in organisations and notices their influence on the efficiency of organisation's activities possesses the ability to produce typical written papers, in particular those related to questions connected with national security using the basic theoretical interpretations as well as other sources possesses the ability to give talks on the topics of professional knowledge in Polish and in a foreign language, using the scientific tools pertaining to national security and other sources possesses linguistic ability in the area of sciences and disciplines linked to national security according to the requirements proper for the B2 level of the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages is able to provide premedical first-aid in the typical situations of threat to human lives possesses the ability to justify his/her views in a professional way as well as to give answers to criticism using the acquired knowledge can make use of basic computer software to solve problems which appear at work understands the need for constant learning, is able to improve and complement his/her knowledge and skills acquired so far is ready to participate actively in the work of groups, organisations and institutions implementing tasks in the area of security and to take on different roles in them; he/she is also able to communicate with persons who are and are not specialist in a given area is able to determine properly the priorities which serve the implementation of defined tasks is able to identify correctly and solve dilemmas resulting from professional work following the legal and ethical rules is able to participate in social, (political, economic and civic) projects, while taking into consideration the legal, economic and political aspects as well as security sciences demonstrates tolerance and respect towards the views and system of values of other people notices the need for rational and effective use of limited public and private resources, is able to think and act in a business-like way having in mind optimisation of undertaken activities demonstrates responsibility for the safety of other persons, particularly in life-threatening situations appreciates the value and influence of national heritage on the shape of the contemporary state and social bonds, notices the need for protection of cultural heritage